Re FNC Water strategy

I understand the DPIE have done a great deal of work preparing the water strategy for the Far North Coast, which is vital for the projected population in a country predicted to get dryer.

I am concerned about the planned expansion of Dunoon dam. I see that in order to create a water resilient future we need to diversify strategies to achieve this such as adding a desalination plant instead. To put all eggs in one basket is never wise nor recommended.

In addition the cost of the Dunoon dam expansion is to transferred to rate payers by a projected 40 percent increase. Hardly democracy when this strategy is not wanted nor prudent.

The loss of the few remaining rainforest will continue as will the koala trees be gone. Please reconsider this dam and choose to diversify strategies to provide future generations a safe water supply.

Thank you, regards,
